Pullman Laundry Truck Hit By Rock Island Train Near Mokena Driver Seriously Hurt

The Emil Cappel crossing of the Rock Island east of Mokena was the scene of a serious accident about 8:30 o'clock Thursday morning when a west bound passenger train struck a truck of the Model Wet Wash Laundry Company of Pullman, seriously injuring the driver, Louis Banstra, aged 52 of Pullman. Mr. Banstra was coming toward Mokena with laundry and when he got to the crossing he had to wait for a passing east bound train to clear the crossing and it is thought he started to cross over without watching for a train from the east. The engineer could not avoid hitting the truck which was completely wrecked and the laundry scattered over the right of way. Mr. Banstra was picked out of the wreckage, placed on the train and taken to the St. Joseph hospital at Joliet. Just how badly he was hurt has not been learned. Mrs. Emil Cappel witnessed the accident from her home and called the Cooper & Hostert garage at Mokena thinking it might have been someone from Mokena and a number of men at once went to the scene of the accident. The smashed truck was taken to the Cooper & Hostert garage and a load of wet wash was taken to the Rock Island freight room at Mokena.

Child Plays With Matches Dies Of Burns

Roscoe Penrose, Jr., 18 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Penrose, Sr., was left alone in the Penrose home at Spencer Tuesday afternoon. He crawled about the floor and found a box of matches. When the mother, Mrs. Roscoe Penrose, Sr., returned the clothing had been burned from the child and the rug was afire. She extinguished the blaze and called Dr. W. V. Hedges of Frankfort to attend the baby, but he died four hours later. Roscoe was the only son of Roscoe Penrose, Sr., section foreman on the Michigan Central railroad at Spencer, a small village near New Lenox.

Bootlegger Shot Burned And Part- ly Eaten By Dogs

Sergeant Elmer Keuch of Tinley Park who is connected with the Cook County highway police operating out of Homewood, was called on a gruesome murder case near Chicago Heights the past week. A farmer residing near that city had reported finding the body of a man in his field. When the officers got on the scene they found that the man who was about 28 years old and had been shot four times. Gasoline had been poured over the body and then set afire. Part of the clothing had been burned away exposing the charred flesh. Dogs had got at the body and part of the flesh had been chewed from the bones. It is thought the body had been lying in the field several days before being discovered. It is thought that the youth said to have been an ex-prize fighter from Roseland, was taken for a ride in a bootleg war.

Mokena To Have First Community Christmas Tree, Sponsored By P. T. A.

For the first time in the history of Mokena there is going to be a community Christmas tree and a Christmas party this year. The ladies will be interested to read the following letter:
Dear Kiddies:
Mr. Heiman, our Parent-Teacher President wrote a letter to Santa Claus asking if it would be possible for him to come to a party for you on some evening shortly before Christmas. He is a pretty busy old fellow but always wants to make every one happy, so he said that he could come on the 21st, the Tuesday evening before Christmas at 8 p. m. We are going to have our party for him and for you at the St. John Evangelical church basement. Santa asked that we let him bring some goodies for you so he'll have something to give each kiddie. Great isn't it?
We're sure every single one of you will come and bring your mothers and daddies. They will have a good time too for after Santa gives his part of the good time we have planned a dandy entertainment. Your teachers have planned that part of the program fun and we expect some of you will be in it.

Won't Santa be tickled?
We are going to have a big Xmas tree out of doors, somewhere near the Rock Island depot with all kinds of pretty lights and trimmings on it. We are going to light this tree every evening from Xmas eve till after New Year's Day. Don't you think that will help to dress up our little town and make us all happy? Won't it be cheerful to have a dandy great big tree with pretty colored lights all over it to look at?

We are planning to have a community sing around this tree some evening, perhaps Xmas night. We want all the big and all the little folks who care to, come and sing Xmas carols. We'll all of us be little folks that night. Sing hard and be just so happy. Come early to the Xmas sing. Wrap up tight so Jack Frost won't get you. See that your mothers and daddies do too. We'll just have heaps of fun. We'll tell you the night of our party just what time we'll meet at the tree.
Now don't forget our kiddies party at the St. John church, Tuesday evening, December 21st at 8 p. m. Everyone, big and little, more than welcome.

S. W. Highway Discussed At Orland Meeting

The Southwest Highway one of the big super highways that Cook County is going to build thru Oak Lawn, Worth and Orland is going to be a reality next year according to plans now under way. Surveys for the routing of the new road have been made, but an opportunity is being given to the various communities thru which the highway is to go to have a voice in its location.

A meeting was held at the Orland Highschool last Thursday night to talk the matter over. The meeting was called by the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce who have been pushing the new highway the past year. At this meeting Mr. Lamb of the State Highway Department was present and gave some interesting information. Mr. Parker of the Chicago Regional Planning Commission was also present.

The routing question will be arrived at after a conference with the county commissioners it is thought. Whether Mokena will come in on this project has not been stated, this much is certain if Mokena will get busy and plug for themselves they will stand as good a show as any other community, but they will certainly not get anywhere if they expect someone else to do it for them.

S. W. Chamber Of Commerce Elects Officers

The Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce met at the Community Church at Worth Wednesday night and elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President, Dr. W. R. Schussler. Vice-Presidents, E. J. Benes, Ashburn, A. Behrends, Oak Lawn, A. Schmalen, Chicago Ridge, J. J. Crandall, Worth, Wm. Harnew, Worth township, F. Springling, Palos Park, Edward Cowan, for Palos township, Wm. Rahey, Orland, Wm. Beagley, Orland township, Ona McGovney, Mokena, Nick Welter, Homer, Dr. Paddock, Lockport.

B. F. Rolfe, Secretary, Worth, Dr. Knox, Orland, Treasurer. Reports of the activities of the Chamber during the year were read

Orland Water Main Job Let For $17500

The village of Orland is going to extend its watermain to the Orland Park highlands sub-division by spring and on Monday night the village board received bids on the proposed job. Pronger Brothers of Blue Island were awarded the job on their bid of $17,500. About one mile of water mains are to be laid. Thomas Davidson of Orland also had a bid in for $19,000 on this job. This will be a big improvement for Orland.

Frankfort Working Hard For New Con- crete Road

Just now Frankfort is all agog over the new concrete highway that is to be built thru Frankfort from Kankakee to Orland. A routing has already been surveyed for, but within the last week a movement has been started and a petition circulated to have the route resurveyed so that the road will come from Andres north to a point west of the village of Frankfort, then follow on the old interurban right of way to Frankfort and then the main street east and then make a bend northward cutting thru the Michigan Central property so that the depot would have to be moved back, and then run north to connect with the Orland road.

Quite a number of signers have been secured so far.

Arrest Oil Land Promoters

A number of Will County people including several from Frankfort purchased land in a Columbian, South American Oil Land scheme promoted by a Chicago concern and are wondering what the result will be since the heads of the concern they bought thru have been arrested. Robert O. George and Dr. Wm. A. McRoberts of Joliet connected with the concern were also arrested for selling real estate with out a license. Newton Hossbach and Glenn Folkers of Frankfort bought 35 and 50 acres each.

Autos Collide

As J. H. Nordsall of Mokena was turning on Front street in front of his home Thursday afternoon, he failed to see Fred Hentsch coming west with his big truck and the two machines collided. Luckily no one was hurt and the auto and truck were not badly damaged.

Form $50 Club

A new club known as the $50 Club has been organized in the St. John Evangelical church at Mokena for the purpose of paying off the church indebtedness. The object of the Club is to get 100 members who will pledge to pay $1 per week toward paying off the debt. By so doing $5,000 a year could be easily raised.

Raises German Police Dogs

August Schmeckpeper is raising genuine German police dogs to sell on his farm near Mokena. Mr. Schmeckpeper has a pedigree German police dog Golfo Von Mongoldstein, a daughter of a famous German police dog sold sometime ago by a Chicago Heights man for a big price. Mr. Schmeckpeper's dog has been trained to get the mail and bring water to the men in the field in the summer. The dogs are intelligent and are valuable. Mr. Schmeckpeper will gladly show the dogs to anyone interested.

Mr. Schmeckpeper's dog is a descendant of Asta Von Mangelstein the shepherdess or police dog for which C. Foster, of the Lincoln-Dixie theatre of Chicago Heights paid $1250 a few years ago.

Cotton Sausage

One of our most useful crops, both for our protection and our destruction, is cotton. It enters into the making of our clothing, munitions, and our breakfast sausages. Cotton, as we see it growing, is just beautiful plant, first with its reddish flower and then its snowy white boll. The cotton is mostly picked by hand as the power suction pickers are not completely perfected. The picker wears a long sack hung over his shoulders and dragging far behind him. He fills this sack with the cotton mixed with the seed. It is spread out to dry. It is next run thru the gin where the seeds are extracted and the cotton is baled ready for factory use. Oil, meal, and cotton seed cake are made from the seed. The cotton is made into thread, clothing and other products of which we all know.

The life history of cotton may be seen in an exhibition which the fifth and sixth grades of the Navasota Public School of Texas has collected and sent to the Mokena public school. This exhibit is on display at the Mokena High school. It may be seen at 4 p. m. every school day until Christmas.

STORY FROM THE START

Harry Ormerod, proscribed traitor to the British crown as a Stuart partisan, returning from France to London without friends or prospects, rescues Alderman Robert Juggins from assassins who had waylaid him. The arrival of the watch puts an end to the affair, and Harry tells his new acquaintance of his former activities as a soldier in the service of the Stuarts and later an official at the "court" of the so-called King James the Third.

I had forgotten my surroundings, forgotten the dingy cobbles of Mincing lane, forgotten the strange circumstances under which I had met this strange person who seemed so intimately versed in my family history. I lived over again the brave days at Foxcroft when Charles had been master and I his lieutenant. But the moment passed, the memories faded, and my eyes saw again the drab buildings of the alley and the odd figure of my deliverer—whom I had first delivered. "And you, sir," I said. "May I ask how it happens you know so much concerning the fortunes of a plain Dorset family?"

He seemed not to hear me, standing there in a brown study, and I spoke to him again sharply. "Yes, yes, I heard," he answered, almost impatiently. "I was— But this is no place for discussion. Come with me to my house."

Some trace of my feelings must have been revealed in my attitude—my face he could not have seen in the darkness—for he continued:

"You need not fear me, Master Ormerod. I mean you no harm. I could not do harm to your father's son."

"But you?" I asked. "Who are you, sir?"

He chuckled dryly. "You know my name," he answered, "and you heard the watch acknowledge my civic dignity. For the rest—if you have spent much time in Dorset you should know a Dorset voice."

"I do that," I assented heartily, "and 'tis grateful to my ears."

"Then be content with that, sir, for a few minutes. Come, let us be on our way. I have reasons for not wishing He set off at a great pace, his head buried in his cloak collar, and I walked beside him, puzzled exceedingly.

Ten minutes later we stopped before a tall, gabled house of brick and timber on the near side of Holborn. My companion produced a key from his person and unlocked a heavy door which opened upon a staircase leading to the second story. The first floor was occupied by a shop.

"Enter, Master Ormerod," said Juggins. "You are right welcome. I hope you have none of the country gentleman's scorn for the home of an honest merchant."

"A beggar must not be a chooser," I answered. "But if I were not indebted to you for my liberty I should still be glad to visit a Dorset man who knows how to fight and who remembers the woods of Foxcroft."

"Well spoken," applauded Juggins as he fastened the door behind us. "So I might have expected your father's son to speak."

"That is the second time you have called me 'my father's son,'" I said. "Prithce, Master Juggins, had you acquaintance with my father?"

"Bide, bide," he replied enigmatically. "We shall settle all that anon. After you, sir."

And he ushered me up the stairs, which were hung with the skins of many kinds of animals, some of which I did not even know. The stairs gave upon a large hall, similarly decorated, and through this we passed into a comfortable chamber which stretched across the front of the house.

Master Juggins relieved me of my cloak and hat and motioned to a deep chair in front of the fire.

"Rest yourself, Master Ormerod. Presently we shall have provender for the inner man as well. Ho, Goody! Art abed, after all?"

"Abed? Abed?" answered a thin, old voice that was inexpressibly sweet, with a Dorset burr that made Master Robert's sound like the twang of a Londoner. "Abed? says he. When did I ever feel the sheets, and not knowing he was warm and safe and his posset-cup where it belongs—which is in his stomach? Abed! Didst ever find—"

She stepped into the room, a quaint little figure in hodge-noddy, a dainty cap perched on her wispy white hair, her brown eyes gleaming in the candlelight, the criss-crossed wrinkles of her cheeks shining like a network of fine lace. In her hands she held a tray supporting a steaming flagon and divers covered dishes of pewterware. Juggins favored me with a humorous glance.

"Sure, I grow more troublesome year by year, granny," he said as she paused at sight of me. "Here I am come home later than ever, bringing a guest with me. Who think you he is?"

She looked at us inquiringly.

"'Tis Master Ormerod."

"Ormerod? Not—"

"Aye; Master Harry."

"But he is in France!"

"Nay; he is here."

She drew closer, and studied my features under the candles that shone from the mantel shelf. "Is he in danger?" she asked breathlessly.

"The watch were after him when he came to my rescue," replied Juggins. "Yet he came."

She patted my cheek with her hand. "That was a deed which you need never be ashamed of, Master Ormerod, and you shall win free to safety, whatever it may be or wherever, if Robert and I have any wits between us. Sit yourself down, Master Ormerod, and you shall have a draft of mullied ale and a dish of deviled bones and thereafter a bed with sheets that have lain in Dorset lavender. Hath it a welcome sound to you?"

The tears came into my eyes. "I am happier this night than I have been any time since Charles and I left Foxcroft," I said. "But pray tell me why you two, who are strangers to me, should be so interested in an out-cast?"

"He does not know?" exclaimed the little old lady.

"I have told him nothing," said Juggins, smiling.

"Well, 'tis time he knew he was amongst the right sort of friends," the little lady said. "You are too young, Master Ormerod, to remember old Peter Juggins—"

A light burst upon my addled wits. "Why, of course!" I cried. "He was steward under my father, and in his father's time before him! But you?"

"Peter was my husband," she said simply. "Robert here is our grandson. When Peter died your father offered his place to Robert. Robert would have none of it. He had the wandering bee in his bonnet. He was young, and he must see the world. He would make his fortune, too. No life as an estate steward for him."

"And wise I was, too, granny," interjected Master Juggins. "Even you will grant that now."

"Be not too elevated by your good fortune," she retorted. "Had you followed your grandfather at Foxcroft your counsel might have restrained Master Harry and his brother from their madness—"

"I wish it might have," I said bitterly, thinking of Charles' lonely grave on a mist-draped hillside in the Scotch highlands.

"Many a gentleman would have taken in bad part such an answer to an offer made in kindness, Master Ormerod. But not your father. No, after trying all he could by fair means to dissuade Robert from his course, he asked where his fancies drifted, and then supplied him with money for the voyage to the Western Plantations and to enable him to secure a start."

"Twice that permitted Robert to go overseas and to set himself up as a fur-trader there and afterward to return and establish his business downstairs, which hath grown so that it is more than he can handle. All of it, I say, we owe to you."

"All of it, granny," reaffirmed Master Juggins himself. "Y'have not made it one whit too strong for me. But I would find out before we sleep how I may be of aid to Master Ormerod."

"Aid?" quoth she. "All that we have in the world is his, if he wants it; aye, the clothes off our backs. Good night to you, Master Ormerod. And remember, this house, poor though it be for your father's son, is to be your home until you have a better."

I rose and bowed my acknowledgments, but I could not speak. My heart was too full. Here in this bleak, unfriendly London, which had greeted me with suspicion and persecution, I had found friendship and assistance. It was almost too good to believe.

"I have no claim upon you, Master

Timber, Sound, Though Buried for Centuries

Furniture made from oak used by the Romans more than 1,800 years ago in the construction of an embankment for the Thames is shortly to be added to the historic treasures of the Mansion house, says the London Mail.

The timber, discovered during excavations behind King William street, E. C., is in good condition, although it has been buried for centuries. It is in the possession of Mr. Thomas J. Edwards, a member of the London and Middlesex archeological society, who, with other experts, is satisfied that the find is part of the first embankment built by the Romans.

A member of the society said the timbered embankment is 83 feet north of the Roman wall, probably built 200 years later.

Whole trunks of trees, piled one above the others, six deep and locked by cross-timbers, were found in such good condition that they can still be used for almost any purpose.

Juggins," I exclaimed as the door closed behind his grandmother. "Remember that. And let me not imperil for one moment two friends of my father, who revere his memory as I had not supposed any did, save myself."

He pushed me down into my chair by the fire.

"There is no question of claim, sir. 'Tis a privilege. Do you tell me now of your present plight. Fear not to be frank with me, Master Ormerod. I do not mix in politics. I am none of your red-hot loyalists who would hang a man because he remarks that our worthy king is a Hanoverian by birth. But on the other hand I'll have naught to do with these plotters who fume over the exiled Stuarts."

"The Stuarts went, sir, because they overtaxed the forbearance of a long-suffering people. They might have returned ere this, as you know, had they possessed the good sense to appreciate what their whilom people required. But they lacked that good sense, Master Ormerod, and with all deference I say to you they will never return unless they learn that lesson very soon."

I leaned forward in my chair and interrupted him, the words bubbling from my lips.

"I could not have put neater my own feelings, Master Juggins. When I was a lad not yet of age I risked all I had for the Stuart cause. What came of it? A life of exile that might have ruined me, as it has many a better man. My family's estate was sequestered; my outlawry was proclaimed. I have no place to lay my head, save it be by the bounty of a foreigner."

"Have I secured any moral satisfaction by these sacrifices? At first I thought I had. But when I looked closer I found that I had done nothing for my country. For the Stuarts, yes. But for my country, nothing."

"This made me think the harder, Master Juggins. At the beginning I had taken zest in the plots and plans which were aimed to bring about his restoration to power."

"But the longer I studied them the more insincere they became. I found my leader a catspaw of foreigners, used to undermine England's prestige. His aims were not the good of England, but his own aggrandizement, the furthering of France's ambitions."

"Hast learned that, lad? Why, then, there's no more loyal Englishman in London!"

"So you think," I answered. "So I think. But hear me out. I told my feelings to a certain great gentleman who handles affairs at St. Germain. He cursed me for a turncoat, would have ordered his lackeys to flog me from the palace. I left him—in disgrace. The doors of my friends were closed to me. I thought I would make my way to England and begin a new life."

"So I applied to the English ambassador. Did I think he was so innocent as to be blinded by such transparent trickery? Nay, the Stuarts must seek elsewhere for means to plant a fresh spy in England. In desperation then I bought passage from a smuggler of Dieppe, who landed me three weeks since in Sussex. I made my way to Dorset, hoping to find old friends who would help me to gain a pardon; but I was recognized by one of my cousins who now hold Foxcroft house, and he raised a hue and cry after me, fearing no doubt that I sought to regain the estate."

"Since then I have been hunted like a beast. My last shilling was spent this morning. Tomorrow, had I escaped so long, I planned to sell my sword, and if all else failed to seek a press-gang."

"Let us thank God you heard my cries," said Juggins earnestly. "I do," I said, "and with no lack of reverence, my friend, I also thank you."

He gave me a keen look. "You call me friend. Do you mean the word?"

"Why not?"

"I was your father's servant," he said, and he said it so that the words were at once proud and humble.

I caught his hand in mine. "You were his friend, too; and who am I, an outlaw without name or fortune, to set myself above a man who has prospered like you through the diligence of his own hands and brains?"

Master Juggins drew a deep breath and wrung my hand hard.

"You'll do, lad," he said. "My help would have been yours on any terms. But you have made it a glad privilege for me to help you. Doubt not we shall find a way."

"Now get you to bed. I shall have somewhat to say to you on the morrow."

The part played by the inexhaustible riches of the American colonies in the machinations of European politics comes as a revelation to Ormerod.

Lesson for December 19

SAMUEL THE JUST JUDGE

LESSON TEXT—I Sam. 7:1-17, 12:1-25.

GOLDEN TEXT—Prepare your heart unto the Lord and serve Him only.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God Helps the People at Mizpah.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Victory at Mizpah.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—What Samuel Did for His People.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—How the Lord Helps.

I. Samuel Called the People to Forsake Their Idols (7:1-6).

Under the administration of Eli, the nation rapidly deteriorated. For their sins, God permitted the nation to be bitterly oppressed by the Philistines. Samuel promised them deliverance on the condition of repentance.

II. Samuel Prayed for the People (7:7-14).

Moved by fear of the Philistines the people besought Samuel to cry unto God for them. In response to his prayer God miraculously delivered them from the Philistines.

III. Samuel Judging Israel (7:15-17).

Bethel, Gilgal, Mizpah and Ramah were his circuit, to each of which he made annual visits. These centers were for the accommodation of the people.

IV. Samuel's Farewell Address (12:1-25).

When Saul, the new king, was crowned, Samuel turned over to him his authority, and gracefully retired. 1. Samuel's challenge to the people (vv. 1-5).

(1) A reminder of the way the king had been given (v. 1).

He showed that they were directly responsible for the change in government. Though keenly feeling the reflection upon himself, and their ingratitude to God in their demand for a king, he had not resisted their wish.

(2) Review of his own administration (vv. 2, 3).

a. Walk from childhood (v. 2). Samuel's was a remarkable life; from childhood to old age he had lived an upright and pure life.

b. Career as judge and ruler (v. 3). He boldly challenged them to show where and how he had ever oppressed the people (vv. 4, 5).

It was Samuel's right as he laid down the reins of government to have his record vindicated and to have his integrity established beyond a doubt, so that no evil-minded man should ever be able to cast reproach upon him.

2. Samuel reviews God's dealing from the time of Moses (vv. 6-15).

He reasoned with them concerning the good hand of the Lord upon them from the time of Moses. Though they with ingratitude turned from the Lord and demanded a king like the other nations, He had acceded to their request and set a king over them.

(1) National prosperity conditioned by obedience (v. 14).

Though they had displeased God in choosing a king, if they would fear the Lord and render obedience, national prosperity would still be given.

(2) Disobedience to God meant the nation's ruin (v. 15).

It is folly to ask God's blessing upon a nation while it is living in rebellion against Him.

3. Samuel's own vindication (vv. 16-19).

This was such a critical hour in the history of the nation that Samuel sought to indelibly impress its meaning on their hearts. This he did by means of the thunder and rain out of season. Harvest time was not the season for thunder and rain, so when it came at the call of Samuel, the people were affrighted. They saw it as an example of God's mighty power, which if directed against them, would destroy them in an instant.

4. Samuel's gracious response (vv. 20-25).

(1) "Fear not—serve the Lord with all your heart" (vv. 20-22).

Samuel did not minimize their sin but assured them that if they would serve the Lord wholeheartedly He would not forsake them. The ground of their hope was the faithfulness of God in keeping His covenant.

(2) "God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you" (v. 23).

The people had rejected Samuel, yet he had such magnanimity of soul that he did not allow their ingratitude to cause his intercession for them to cease. He assured them that in spite of their sin their one concern should be to fear the Lord and serve Him wholeheartedly.

Pleasure

The pastor says: To expect adequate refreshment for the human spirit from mere pleasure is like gathering dewdrops and blowing upon them to keep them moist.—John Andrew Holmes.

Repentance

Repentance is a hearty sorrow for our past misdeeds, and a sincere resolution and endeavor, to the utmost of our power to conform our actions to the law of God.

The KITCHEN CABINET

So long as men shall be on earth There will be tasks for them to do. Some way for them to show their worth;

Each day shall bring its problems new. And men shall dream of mightier deeds Than ever have been done before;

There always shall be human needs For men to work and struggle for. —Edgar Guest.

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

For a luncheon dish scalloped corn makes a most tasty one. The following is an old dish:

Corn à la Southern.—To one can of corn add two well-beaten eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of pepper, one-half teaspoonful of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter and one pint of scalded milk. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a slow oven until firm.

Corn Oysters.—Beat two eggs, add one can of corn, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one tablespoonful of butter and one-half cupful of flour, season with salt and pepper and fry on a hot griddle in small spoonfuls. Nice served with chicken or squab.

Mock Crab.—Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, add one-half cupful of flour mixed with one-half teaspoonful of salt, three-fourths teaspoonful of mustard, one-fourth teaspoonful of paprika; when well blended pour on gradually one and one-half cupfuls of milk. Bring to the boiling point and add one can of corn, one egg slightly beaten, three teaspoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce. Turn into a buttered baking dish, cover with croutons and bake until the croutons are brown.

Fried Celery, Tomato Sauce.—Wash and scrape celery, cut into three-inch lengths, dip into batter and fry in deep fat. Drain on brown paper and serve with tomato sauce. To make batter mix one-half cupful of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of pepper, one-third of a cupful of milk and one egg well beaten.

Cooked celery served with cheese and white sauce as an escalloped dish makes a good hot dish for luncheon or supper.

Baked Chestnuts.—Remove the shells from a pint of chestnuts, put into a baking dish and cover with seasoned chicken stock. Bake until soft, keeping covered until nearly done.

Boiled Chestnuts with Sauce.—Remove the hard shells from the nuts, blanch them in boiling water ten minutes, then drop them in cold water and rub off the brown skins. Drop the blanched nuts into rapidly boiling water and cook until tender when pierced with a fork. Drain and let steam over boiling water until the sauce is made. Serve with a rich white sauce or a drawn butter, or a Hollandaise.

More Good Things.

The following is a delicious way of serving chicken: Dress the chicken and cut into serving sized pieces, stew until tender. If the chicken is tough add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar when it is cooked. Add salt, four or five whole cloves and peppercorns, a bay leaf, two cupfuls of milk and one-half cupful of cream. When it boils thicken with a tablespoonful or two of flour stirred smooth with cold milk. Pour over well baked baking powder biscuits split and buttered and placed on a hot platter.

Parsnip Puff.—Boil parsnips until tender, put through a sieve, add a tablespoonful of butter to each cupful of pulp, season with salt and pepper. Beat two egg yolks, add to one-fourth cupful of white sauce, cool, and add the stiffly beaten whites, pour into a well buttered baking dish and set into hot water; bake until brown.

Another Way With Parsnips.—Clean the fresh vegetables and cut into narrow strips, put on to cook with a tablespoonful or two of butter for each pint of sliced parsnips, add no water, cover tightly and steam, cooking carefully until tender. There will be moisture enough in the vegetable to keep from burning. When tender add salt and pepper and stir until lightly browned.

Spanish Cream.—Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water. Cream the yolks of two eggs with one-half cupful of sugar. Pour over these the gelatin, stirring all the time, adding a pint of hot milk. Add a pinch of salt and flavor. Put back in a double boiler and cook as thick as boiled custard. Cool and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Put into a mold and set away to chill.

Dumplings.—Take one beaten egg, one cupful of buttermilk, one-half teaspoonful of salt—if buttermilk is sweet add no soda, if slightly sour add a pinch of soda—flour to make a drop batter, adding two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Drop into a hot stew of meat or chicken and cover at once; cook from eight to twelve minutes, according to size of the dumplings.

A delicious frosting for any plain cake is a boiled frosting to which a little cream, chopped nuts and raisins are added.

Christmas Sketches from Dickens

DON'T be cross, uncle!" said the nephew.

"What else can I be," returned the uncle, "when I live in such a world of fools as this? Merry Christmas! Out upon merry Christmas! What's Christmas time to you but a time for paying bills without money; a time for finding yourself a year older, and not an hour richer; a time for balancing your books and having every item in 'em through a round dozen of months presented dead against you? If I could work my will," said Scrooge indignantly, "every idiot who goes about with 'Merry Christmas' on his lips should be boiled with his own pudding, and buried with a stake of holly run through his heart. He should!"—Christmas Carol, Stave 1.

The noise in this room was perfectly tumultuous, for there were more children there than Scrooge, in his agitated state of mind, could count; and, unlike the celebrated herd in the poem, they were not forty children conducting themselves like one, but every child was conducting himself like forty. The consequences were uproarious beyond belief; but no one seemed to care; on the contrary, the mother and daughter laughed heartily, and enjoyed it very much; and the latter, soon beginning to mingle in the sports, got pillaged by the young brigands most ruthlessly. What would I not have given to be one of them! Though I never could have been so rude, no, no! I wouldn't for the wealth of all the world have crushed that braided hair, and torn it down; and for the precious little shoe, I wouldn't have plucked it off, God bless my soul! to save my life. As to measuring her waist in sport, as they did, bold young brood, I couldn't have done it; I should have expected my arm to have grown round it for a punishment, and never come straight again. And yet I should have dearly liked, I own, to have touched her lips, to have questioned her, that she might have opened them; to have looked upon the lashes of her downcast eyes, and never raised a blush; to have let loose waves of hair, an inch of which would be a keepsake beyond price; in short, I should have liked, I do confess, to have had the lightest license of a child, and yet to have been man enough to know its value.

But now a knocking at the door was heard, and such a rush immediately ensued that she, with laughing face and plundered dress, was borne toward it in the center of a flushed and boisterous group, just in time to greet the father, who came home attended by a man laden with Christmas toys and presents. Then the shouting and the struggling, and the onslaught that was made on the defenceless porter! The scaling him, with chairs for ladders, to dive into his pockets, despoil him of brown-paper parcels, hold on tight by his cravat, hug him round the neck, pommel his back, and kick his legs in irrepressible affection. The shouts of wonder and delight with which the development of every package was received! The terrible announcement that the baby had been taken in the act of putting a doll's frying pan into his mouth, and was more than suspected of having swallowed a fictitious turkey, glued on a wooden platter! The immense relief of finding this a false alarm! The joy, and gratitude, and ecstasy! They are all indescribable alike. It is enough that, by degrees, the children and their emotions got out of the parlor, and, by one stair at a time, up to the top of the house, where they went to bed, and so subsided.—Christmas Carol, Stave 2.

Oh, a wonderful pudding. Bob Cratchit said, and calmly, too, that he regarded it as the greatest success achieved by Mrs. Cratchit since their marriage. Mrs. Cratchit said that now the weight was off her mind, she would confess she had her doubts about the quantity of flour. Everybody had something to say about it, but nobody said or thought it was at all a small pudding for a large family. It would have been flat heresy to do so. Any Cratchit would have blushed to hint at such a thing.

At last the dinner was all done, the cloth was cleared, the hearth swept, and the fire made up. The compound in the jug being tasted, and considered perfect, apples and oranges were put upon the table, and a shovel full of chestnuts on the fire. Then all the Cratchit family drew round the hearth, in what Bob Cratchit called a circle, meaning half a one; and at Bob Cratchit's elbow stood the family display of glass, two tumblers and a custard-cup without a handle.

These held the hot stuff from the jug, however, as well as golden goblets would have done; and Bob served it out with beaming looks, while the chestnuts on the fire sputtered and cracked noisily. Then Bob proposed:

"A merry Christmas to us all, my dears. God bless us."

Which all the family re-echoed.

"God bless us every one!" said Tiny Tim, the last of all.—Christmas Carol, Stave 3.

"I don't know what day of the month it is," said Scrooge; "I don't know how long I have been among the spirits. I don't know anything. I'm quite a baby. Never mind. I don't care. I'd rather be a baby. Hallo! Whoop! Hallo here!"

He was checked in his transports by the churches ringing out the lustiest peals he had ever heard. Clash, clash, hammer; ding, dong, bell. Bell, dong, ding; hammer, clang, clash! Oh, glorious! glorious!

Running to the window, he opened it, and put out his head. No fog, no mist; clear, bright, jovial, stirring, cold; cold, piping for the blood to dance to; golden sunlight; heavenly sky; sweet fresh air; merry bells. Oh, glorious! glorious!

"What's today?" cried Scrooge, calling downward to a boy in Sunday clothes, who perhaps had loitered in to look about him.

"Eh?" returned the boy, with all his might of wonder.

"What's today, my fine fellow?" said Scrooge.

"Today!" replied the boy. "Why, Christmas day."

"It's Christmas day!" said Scrooge to himself.

"I haven't missed it. The spirits have done it all in one night. They can do anything they like. Of course, they can. Of course, they can. Hallo, my fine fellow!"

"Hallo!" returned the boy.

"Do you know the poulterer's, in the next street but one, at the corner?" Scrooge inquired.

"I should hope I did," replied the lad.

"An intelligent boy!" said Scrooge. "A remarkable boy! Do you know whether they've sold the prize turkey that was hanging up there?—Not the little prize turkey, the big one?"

"What, the one as big as me?" returned the boy.

"What a delightful boy!" said Scrooge. "It's a pleasure to talk to him. Yes, my buck!"

"It's hanging there now," replied the lad.

"Is it?" said Scrooge. "Go and buy it."

"Walk-er!" exclaimed the boy.

"No, no," said Scrooge, "I am in earnest. Go and buy it, and tell 'em to bring it here, that I may give them the directions where to take it. Come back with the man, and I'll give you a shilling. Come back with him in less than five minutes and I'll give half-a-crown!"

The boy was off like a shot. He must have had a steady hand at a trigger who could have got a shot off half so fast.

"I'll send it to Bob Cratchit's," whispered Scrooge, rubbing his hands and splitting with a laugh. "He shan't know who sends it. It's twice the size of Tiny Tim. Joe Miller never made such a joke as sending it to Bob's will be!"

The hand in which he wrote the address was not a steady one; but write it he did, somehow, and went down stairs to open the street door, ready for the coming of the poulterer's man. As he stood there, waiting his arrival, the knocker caught his eye.

"I shall love it as long as I live!" cried Scrooge, patting it with his hand. "I scarcely ever looked at it before. What an honest expression it has in its face! It's a wonderful knocker!—Here's the turkey. Hallo! Whoop! How are you! Merry Christmas!"

It was a turkey! He never could have stood upon his legs, that bird. He would have snapped 'em short off in a minute, like sticks of sealing wax.

"Why, it's impossible to carry that to Camden Town," said Scrooge. "You must have a cab."

The chuckle with which he said this, and the chuckle with which he paid for the cab, and the chuckle with which he recompensed the boy, were only to be exceeded by the chuckle with which he sat down breathless in his chair again, and chuckled till he cried.

Shaving was not an easy task, for his hand continued to shake very much; and shaving requires attention, even when you don't dance while you are at it. But if he had cut the end of his nose off, he would have put a piece of sticking-plaster over it, and been quite satisfied.

He dressed himself "all in his best," and at last got out into the streets. The people were by this time pouring forth, as he had seen them with the Ghost of Christmas Present; and walking with his hands behind him, Scrooge regarded every one with a delighted smile. He looked so irresistibly pleasant, in a word, three or four good-humored fellows said, "Good morning, sir! A merry Christmas to you!" And Scrooge said often afterward, that of all the blithe sounds he had ever heard, those were the blithest in his ears.

MOKENA

The 500 Club was entertained on Friday at the home of Mrs. Julius Hirsch. Prizes were awarded.

Mrs. Walter Spiess entertained the Larkin Club Monday afternoon. Santa Claus has many warm and true friends among the kiddies of Mokena as was attested last week when a couple of letters were found in the mail addressed to the jolly old man himself.

Mrs. Florence Hamilton has a very cute and attractive gift shop and has a very cozy and pretty display of holiday goods in her show windows. She carries quite a select line of goods and at prices within reach of all.

Mokena hunters members of the Mokena Gun Club have been duck hunting at the club's preserve along the Illinois river south of Spring Valley and bagged quite a number of ducks.

Miss Merle Hacker who has been ill and confined to bed, is slowly improving.

The Mokena Bluestreak A. C. is planning to hold a dance at St. Mary's hall New Year's eve.

Richard Hensel, local druggist found the Christmas trade so good last year that he has doubled his stock this year and carries one of the finest lots of toys and other Christmas goods. The display is about the best of its kind seen in Mokena.

The pre-Christmas concert held at St. John's Sunday night was a real musical treat. Many of the famous Christmas melodies being on the program. When the program was about half thru, the electric lights suddenly grew very dim and the motor could not be used to run the pipe organ. The lights remained that way thru the rest of the program. Later in the night they went off altogether but came on by morning.

The Mokena Hardware Company has a very beautiful decorated display which is attracting much attention. A whole miniature farm yard is depicted in the display. A large farm house, barn, garage, a team of horses pulling a wagon load of corn, the old familiar farm pump, are all shown true to life, all set in a mantle of imitation snow. At night the scene is made very beautiful by a cute lighting effect. The window trimmer who did the job is to be congratulated on his artistic taste and ability.

Roy Krapp who has been ill with pneumonia is improving. Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Houchin and Miss L. A. Justus of Chicago spent Sunday with Mrs. John Semmler.

The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church met at the church Thursday afternoon. The reports of the bazaar held in the St. John's church of the best held in years, over $170 being cleared. In spite of the bad weather there was a big crowd present and everything for sale at the bazaar and supper was sold out.

Henry Yunker of Montana who came to Chicago last week to bring a load of stock to the yards, has been visiting with his mother, Mrs. C. Yunker, with his sister, Mrs. Chas. Erickson and other relatives and friends in this section.

A public bunco party was held at St. Mary's hall Tuesday night. The Ladies Aid of the M. E. church are going to hold a kitchen towel shower at their January meeting for the benefit of the church kitchen.

Mrs. Florence Mahoney who is making waxed water lilies and other imitation flowers, has been getting ing a rush of orders for this kind of work.

The muddy weather of last Sunday left the country roads in a bad condition and the heavy freeze of Monday night has left them rough.

The Don C. Hall Co., who have been showing at Danforth, Ill., have returned to Mokena for the present.

CHIC TRANSPARENT BLACK FROCK; COAT SUGGESTS BLOUSE EFFECT

MORE and more the mode asserts the smartness of black. For coats, the very latest is black suede trimmed in black wolf or lynx. The black velvet toque strikingly draped answers the call of the millinery mode. For dressy wear, in spite of the flare for gay colors, the sentiment for the all-black frock is very pronounced.

What the all-black party or formal afternoon frock lacks in color it makes up for in dainty grace of diaphanous draperies and alluring transparencies. A black georgette frock like the one in the picture, inset with black lace and with a deep lace cape collar is tion of the all-black mode. The fringe is arranged in tiers on the skirt portion and appears in clever appointments on the sleeves with little or none on the bodice.

A decided blouse for the evening wrap, but merely the suggestion of a blouse for the practical daytime top-coat—this is the season's decision of the mode. The problem has been how to introduce the blouse into the coat of cloth without interfering with the straightline silhouette—for women of fashion are loathe to forsake slenderizing lines. In more ways than one this coveted effect has been achieved.

A Black Georgette Frock.

a desirable possession. It serves so charmingly for so many and varied occasions.

Worn over a flesh-colored satin slip it is ideal for the informal party or for afternoon tea. Posed over a black silk slip it becomes a costume of quiet elegance. The charm of the transparent black dress is that it affords so many delightful effects with the interchanging of various colorful costume slips.

The latest entree among black dinner gowns is that all of lace with long tight-fitting sleeves, for sleeves to the wrist are fashion's latest whim for the sheer evening dress. The skirt at the same time introducing a blouse styling. By positioning a subtle fullness at the back above the skirt portion or perhaps placing it under the arm as the model shows in this picture, the almost impossible has been accomplished.

There is another difficulty which has confronted the designer from time to time, that is to adopt the very deep armhole without destroying the straight up and down lines of the coat, for in spite of the obstacles to be overcome, the final ultimatum from fashion headquarters is that both the blouse and the deep armhole must have their place in the season's modes.

Model of Dark Green Suede Cloth.

is bouffant with an intricately contrived girdle.

Black tulle evening gowns also come in for fashion's favor. The full skirts are a mass of fluttering tiers and the hemlines are always scalloped or pointed or gracefully irregular.

Recently arriving imports accented yokes of exquisite white or metal lace, with black as an outstanding number on the present style program.

The fringe-trimmed black chiffon frock is also an interesting interpreta-

And they have! Most successfully, too, for proof of which let the coat in this picture again bear witness. It is an elegant model made of dark green suede cloth, with collar of natural gray fox.

Referring to this collar, it is of exceptionally high-grade fur, appealing to a discriminating taste which prefers a restrained use of the best rather than a lavish display of quantity sans quality. Many of the season's better coats are notably of worthwhile cloth, collared and perhaps cuffed with fur of a most superior sort.

Out of the confusion of styles launched at the beginning of every season there is always some one which stands out prominently—becomes a pronounced vogue. Such is the black or richly colorful coat of either suede or deep pile weave, which is trimmed with light fluffy fur—the kind which flatters in its becomingness. In selecting the midwinter cloth coat one will be according to the dictates of the mode by selecting either a deep wine or dark green cloth trimmed with creamy colored badger or gray fox or wolf.

Poor Critics

"The young of this generation," said Rex Ingram in the smoking room of the Majestic, "are as honorable and virtuous as the young of the last generation were. The trouble doesn't lie with the young, it lies with their critics."

"One of their critics turned up at his office the other day wearing spectacles for the first time."

"Are your eyes beginning to fail?" said his stenographer.

"No, darn it," the man growled. "My eyes, at fifty-three, are just as good as they ever were, but the light nowadays ain't the same."

Human judgment is finite, and, it ought always to be charitable.—William Winter.

Friday Dec. 24th. The annual Christmas program given by the Sunday school at the church at 7:30 A special Christmas offering for World Service of the Methodist Episcopal Church will be taken this evening. We did well last year but feel that we can do much better this coming season.

Sunday Dec. 19th. Bible School at 9:30 a. m. Morning worship at 10:30 a. m. Worship is the atmosphere in which we become more definite conscious of the Divine and through this experience receive new strength, vision and encouragement to face the "grind of life". Do you participate regularly somewhere in this "greatest of the arts"? If not you are cheating your highest life. Evening service at 7:30. This will probably be a summary of the discussions which we have had for some weeks past.

WILLIAM A. GOODALE, Funeral Director and Embalmer. Prompt courteous service. Phone Orland 108. Adv. 2-10-17

Why bake your face and freeze your back--

When you can heat the whole home with only one fire?

SUNBEAM CABINET HEATER

This winter, don't move into one or two stove-heated rooms. Don't wear a shawl or coat to keep your back warm, while you toast your feet. Install the Sunbeam Cabinet Heater and you can live comfortably in every room in your home in the coldest zero weather.

This wonderful heating plant circulates warm air like a furnace instead of radiating heat like a stove. It requires no basement, but fits into your living-room or dining-room like any other fine piece of furniture. It is easy to take care of and replaces two or three stoves, making possible substantial savings in fuel.

We'd like to have you look it over today.

Give A Radiola 20 For Christmas

All the quality of making and performance that a man wants when he is interested in results — at a low price, is packed into one small set — Radiola 20. It has a power tube for volume, — a single control for simplicity — with verniers for accurate tuning of distant stations. And it does get distant.

There is no better gift for a whole family — for Radiola 20 brings in programs of entertainment and education that are enjoyed and appreciated by both children and grown — ups. Nor is there any better gift for one alone, because loneliness and a Radiola 20 do not exist together.

No other gift brings quite as much of the joy of possession. No other gift leaves quite as much of the joy of giving.
